ABOUT U KIANG NANGBAH

U Kiang Nangbah, a revered freedom fighter of Meghalaya, is a symbol of bravery, resilience, and patriotism. Born in the mid-19th century in Jowai, U Kiang Nangbah rose to prominence as a leader who opposed the oppressive policies of British colonial rule in the Jaintia Hills.

His resistance began as he led the indigenous people in their struggle to preserve their customs, traditions, and freedom. The British administration's imposition of heavy taxes, forced labor, and disrespect for local governance systems led to widespread discontent, and U Kiang Nangbah emerged as a unifying force among the Khasi-Pnar people.

In 1861, U Kiang Nangbah initiated a revolt against the British, inspiring his people to reclaim their sovereignty. Despite facing a superior and well-armed colonial force, his unwavering commitment to the cause ignited a spirit of resistance. His efforts culminated in several battles across the Jaintia Hills, showcasing his tactical brilliance and unyielding courage.

However, after a betrayal by informants, U Kiang Nangbah was captured by the British in December 1862. On December 30, 1862, he was executed publicly in Jowai. Before his execution, it is said he proclaimed a prophecy: "If my face turns eastward when I die, our land will be free; if it turns westward, we will remain enslaved."

U Kiang Nangbah's martyrdom continues to inspire generations. His life embodies the values of courage, sacrifice, and love for one's culture and people. Kiang Nangbah Government College honors his legacy by instilling these values in its students, ensuring they carry forward his spirit of determination and pride in their heritage.
